LANDING PAGE

Sentieri

Situated among the vineyards, olive groves, and rolling hills of Loreto Aprutino, Abruzzo, Sentieri is where regenerative agriculture, art, ecology, and community come together.

Azienda Agricola

Our small-batch wine and single-varietal extra virgin olive oil are driven by the belief that great food and wine begin in the field. Our work is guided by hand management and low-intervention practices: careful canopy and soil management, minimal machinery use, and decisions that prioritise long-term health over short-term yield.

Associazione Culturale

A cultural association for art, ecology, and rural imagination.Sentieri di Sogni extends the work of our farm beyond into the cultural life of the valley. It is a space for artists, researchers, practitioners and locals to meet, share, and co-create around the themes of land, ecology, and collective imagination.

At Sentieri, agriculture is a form of imagination.

Our small-batch wine and single-varietal extra virgin olive oil are expressions of place — guided by hand management, minimal intervention, and a deep respect for the cycles of the land. Every decision, from canopy care to soil health, is made with long-term balance in mind.

Olive Oil

Typical of the Vestina hills of Loreto Aprutino, Dritta is a traditional Abruzzese cultivar with deep local roots. Our trees – many over 100 years old – are tended with low-input, artisan care, respecting the ancient tradition of this land.

We harvest by hand, mill the olives within hours of picking, and bottle small batches to protect the fresh aromas of Dritta. Our oil is characterised by the taste of our hills: crisp green bitterness, a round character and a lingering peppery finish on the back palate — a balance of vitality and calm.

Wine

We believe that wine is made in the field long before it even reaches the cellar. We cultivate Montepulciano d'Abruzzo, a grape that feels inseparable from the hills that surround Loreto Aprutino. Its roots reach into heavy clay, drawing out strength and depth that reflect this environment.

The harvest is done by hand in two batches: the first round is completed early to preserve the fresh character of our Vino Rosato, while the second is completed at full maturity for our bold, balanced Vino Rosso. In the cellar, the grapes are simply pressed and left to ferment with minimal interference. As a result, our wine is a living expression of the year that shaped it – every bottle expresses the life of the soil, the balance of the vines, and the rhythm of the seasons.

Artistic and ecological research that redefines our relationship with rural landscapes.

The cultural association Sentieri di Sogni nurtures the cultural, ecological, and social life that allows a landscape to regenerate and thrive. Through residencies, workshops, and events, Sentieri di Sogni brings together artists, researchers, and local communities — rooted in the local landscape yet connected to an international network — to cultivate a more resilient and imaginative relationship with the rural world.

Community Engagement
The rural landscape holds many opportunities to bring people together. For community to thrive, there must be space for shared experiences — cultural, artistic, educational, and physical. We create regular opportunities for connection, fostering a sense of belonging across generations and disciplines.

Art & Artistic Research
Art and research are essential tools for navigating the complex challenges of our time. By inviting artists, thinkers, and makers into dialogue with the land, we open new perspectives and experiment with ways of living and imagining together.

Cultural Heritage & Preservation
Across Italy and beyond, many rural towns face depopulation and the fading of cultural memory. We aim to safeguard and revitalise local heritage, ensuring these living traditions continue to grow and adapt within today's world.

Ecology & Regeneration
Our existence depends on countless relationships with other species. We work to restore native habitats and biodiversity, re-establishing continuity between cultivated and wild spaces — work that combines ecological regeneration with opportunities for education and community engagement.

NOTES

We host residencies and seasonal gatherings that weave together art, agriculture, and community resilience.

We see the countryside as not only a place of agricultural production but also a fertile ground for ideas, creativity, and new ways of living together.

Sentieri is also a place of exchange. Agriculture here is not only production — it is a way to gather knowledge, culture and craft.

As the project grows, we will direct a portion of farm proceeds to fund local cultural projects and ecological restoration.

Our work combines land stewardship with artistic research, experimenting with different ways of inhabiting, observing, and narrating landscapes.

Our work is guided by care: for the land, for the people who help us, and for the connection to the wider community that grows along the way.

We are creating a space where art, ecology, and community come together, rooted in a rural environment yet connected to an international network of people, practices, and ideas.

What we do

- Artistic and ecological research projects that explore the relationship between people and their territory.
- Practical workshops: from herbal self-production, botanical visual arts, clay and collective writing.
- Walks and explorations as tools to read and learn from the landscape.
- Cultural events: exhibitions, gatherings, shared meals, and open days.
- Collaborations with both local and international artists and researchers.

Why join us
Becoming part of Sentieri di Sogni means helping to build a cultural space where local communities meet international networks, and where the rural becomes a living laboratory for ecology and imagination.
When we care for the land, it returns resilience and quality.

Article Highlight

(a few words)

- Our latest article(s)

Wine (200-400 words)

- Viticulture: While wine is the product, we strongly believe wine is made in the field and are guided by our farming practices
- Montepulciano d'Abruzzo: This is what we farm
- Just Wine, Nothing Else: Try to avoid "natural wine" or all of this nonsense as it is really complicated, but there is an opportunity to expand on these topics in the articles section. Here, we want to say that the wine is simply wine. It is simply fermented grape juice with minimal interventions (we have added a tiny amount of sulfur, so I wouldn’t say it's zero-zero wine).

Olive Oil (200-400 words)

(2-4 paragraphs)

- Historical/Cultural Context: Olive trees are a huge part of the landscape in all aspects. They feel like they have always been here, and in many ways they have.
- Dritta Olives: The variety we farm
- Clean product: The main health benefits are preserved through responsible management. We want to let the product shine.

Sentieri di Sogni

1.We cultivate cultural programming, residencies and community projects that support rural regeneration and creative exchange.

2.We cultivate artistic and ecological research that redefines our relationship with rural landscapes and supports sustainable cultural growth.
3.We create experiences that weave art, ecology, and everyday life, inviting research and collective imagination into rural regeneration

Philosophy (100–150 words)

Sentieri di Sogni extends our work beyond production: it supports cultural life, ecological stewardship and community resilience across the valley. We host residencies, workshops and events that bring artists, researchers and neighbours together.

- Sentieri is not just about the land we inhabit, but about the wider context we exist within
- Rural areas (like where we are situated) face many challenges.
- 10% of our farm sales go directly into the association to provide an independent source of funding

The cultural association Sentieri di Sogni nurtures the cultural, ecological, and social life that allows a landscape to thrive. Through residencies, workshops, and events, we bring together artists, researchers, and local communities to explore how creativity can take root in rural contexts.

Sentieri is not only about the land we inhabit, but about the wider network of relations, human and more-than-human, that sustain us. We believe that rural areas, often seen as peripheral, hold vital knowledge and potential for new ways of living and imagining together.

To ensure independence and continuity, 10% of our farm's annual sales go directly into the association, funding projects that foster collective care, artistic experimentation, and ecological resilience.

Our Approach

- Each topic should be displayed in a simple grid or line of "cards" with its own kind of dropdown (expandable box)
- A not-for-profit branch is essential to explore (IN NO PARTICULAR ORDER)
    - Community Building: The rural landscape and small towns have many opportunities to bring people together. For community to thrive, there needs to be opportunities for people to come together, to share space and time. We want to participate in providing regular opportunities from a diverse range of perspectives (art, music, educational, physical etc), big and small for the people around us. A side note is that many young people are not necessarily interested in agriculture which is totally normal, but there should be more opportunities to have cultural – not just agricultural – output and opportunities from these areas
    - Art & Artistic Research: With the dynamic challenges we face in this day and age, art and artistic research are essential tools. By applying the creative process, both have a way of opening new areas of thought and expression. Here, there is also the opportunity to develop interdisciplinary perspectives, creating a space to share ideas and visions, working towards a more sustainable future. Practically, we will host residencies, inviting various practitioners together to explore these ideas, usually leading to sharing this with the broader public
    - Cultural Heritage and Preservation: Many towns in rural Italy (and the world) have slowly faced a depopulation and demographic shift. Some towns have been completely abandoned, and with that, the unique cultural heritage has been lost. We believe it is fundamental to preserve what we have while it is still here. Every small town has its own unique cultural story (and dialects) which shapes the area around it. To not loose our connection to the lands and building we inhabit, it is fundamental to preserve and reinvigorate this heritage whenever possible. This does not mean keeping it fixed, a cultural evolution will naturally come into play in a changing world, but it should be informed by what came before

- Ecology: We obviously are not alone and our existence simply relies on the many interspecies relationships around us. This is very often taken for granted, leaving nature to the national parks (which we are very proud of), but there is an opportunity in the more populated areas to reintroduce this ecological thinking. Many of the areas which have a suitable climate for human agriculture and inhabitation have lost wildlife habitats (flora and fauna), while the national parks are often in “unusable land”. We believe it is important to provide small corridors and spaces for the native habitats to regenerate. Not only is this good for the surrounding areas, but it can help build resilience in the face of a changing climate and offer a new opportunity for young people who might be interested in ecology. It can be a space for education and pondering. Practically, we are working with professionals to regenerate and expand our 3 hectares of forest, whilst making it more accessible for the public. We believe spending time in these areas is fundamental to shifting our focus and offering a perfect educational space.
